(not confirmed)

The Spanish Society of Organic Agriculture (SEAE), is organising a scientific and technical congress since 1994, every two years in order to exchange research results and research advances in organic production, and to analyse its contribution to the development of organic sector, conforming a forum to dialogue and debate with the stakeholders, generating ideas and new future projects. The last 8 years, this exchange was extended to the Latin-American areas. This 9th Congress of SEAE highlights the contribution of OA to the Mediterranean food quality and security, from which we still have little research, in order to stimulate studies in this field.

Catalunya is the region where more organic food is consumed in Spain. For that reason and the fact that an Action Plan for organic food and farming is being implemented from 2008-2012, by different departments, coordinated by the Department of Agriculture and Rural Action (DAR), we found this region a better option compared to other for the IX Congress of SEAE. The choice of Lleida city with a large agricultural tradition has been motivated by various facts, such the interest of the High level Technical School of Agriculture Engineers (ETSEA) from the University of Lleida, in introducing the agro-ecological approach as a Degree in agronomy, initiated by a group teachers, coupled with the support of the Local and Province Authorities which have supported and promoted different organic farmers street fairs together with the commitment of SEAE to face challenges of the the agricultural sector in its development, maintaining a rotational venue for the SEAE Congress, Lleida was an ideal location for it.

>> Aims

- To exchange knowledge, results of studies between researchers, technicians and organic operators
- To discuss / to present the implications of recent findings of research in organic farming
- To debate about the methods of transfer and adaptation of technological innovations in organic operators, organic stakeholders and other representatives of groups that support OA
- To identify policies elements for improvement of the organic agricultural production, in quality and food safety based on science

>> Who is invited?

The congress is open to all those researchers of their area of expertise. Similarly, will be particularly welcome all those interested, farmers, processors, technicians and managers comprising the public sector and are concerned about their future.
